About Morley College London

Morley College London is one of the UK's largest and oldest specialist providers of adult education. Founded by Emma Cons in 1889 to address the learning needs of the working class people of Waterloo and Lambeth, Morley was the first institution of its kind to admit both men and women on an equal footing, and aimed to make education accessible to people who were less fortunate socially and financially. This sense of mission and spirit of inclusion towards the most disadvantaged in society has been a guiding principle in everything Morley has done throughout its history, and its original philanthropic, charitable foundation continues to be a distinguishing feature of the College to the present day.

Today the College offers nearly three thousand courses at all levels, from part-time personal development courses to Access to Higher Education diplomas and HNDs, and has recently announced the launch of BA (Hons) degree programmes from September 2019. The College continues to evolve to meet the changing needs of its students, and its main centre at Westminster Bridge Road near Waterloo is currently undergoing extensive refurbishment to improve its accessibility for people with disabilities.
